Intellectual Property Today Names Brinks Gilson & Lione a "2014 Top Trademark Firm"

June 05, 2014

CHICAGO—Brinks Gilson & Lione, one of the largest intellectual property law firms in the United States, has been named a 2014 Top Trademark Firm by Intellectual Property Today, ranking 15th of 202 law firms according to the number of 2013 U.S. trademark registrations that list the firm or an individual from the firm as the legal representative.

Brinks registered 511 U.S. trademarks on behalf of its clients last year, showing year-over-year growth in the number of trademarks registered, and the highest growth rate among the top 15 ranked firms.

'The volume of trademark registrations ebbs and flows year over year, but Brinks appreciates being consistently recognized as a top trademark firm in the U.S.,' said Christopher M. Dolan, chair of the firm's trademark and unfair competition practice group. 'We are fortunate to have a broad base of dynamic clients and we're pleased with the sustained momentum of growth in trademark registrations issued to our clients. Our clients are leaders in their respective fields and it's gratifying to earn recognition for our attorneys' work protecting our clients' brands.'

Brinks' trademark and unfair competition practice group is at the forefront of trademark and unfair competition law, trying cases throughout the country and arguing them at all levels, including before the Trademark Trial and Appeal Board of the United States Patent and Trademark Office, as well as United States District Courts and Courts of Appeals. Brinks attorneys are not only recognized for their client advocacy; they also shape the field by publishing books and articles, assisting in amending the federal trademark statute, and leading various professional associations.

Intellectual Property Today is one of the legal industry's leading intellectual property publications, focusing on patent, trademark and copyright law. Content is geared to patent attorneys and agents, professionals and executives in firms and companies that provide products and services to this industry.
